Harvest Update

October 7, 2015

ALFALFA

Fourth cutting has been put on hold in New Mexico due to storm systems moving through the area. The upcoming forecast calls for warmer, clearer weather allowing 4th cutting harvest activities to resume. Growers plan to have harvest finished up in the next few weeks.

Growers in Oregon have finished baling the last of their 3rd cutting Alfalfa fields. They are also nearing the end of their 4th cutting harvest and have had very nice harvest weather over the last few days.

Utah has completed their 4th cutting Alfalfa harvest. Growers have produced some nice quality hay from this cutting.

Growers in Washington are putting up the last of their 5th cutting Alfalfa this week. For the most part, the cutting has a good, green color and leafy, soft texture. What little crop remains in the field received some rain over the last two days.

In the Pacific Southwest, rain has returned to most of the region causing a delay in the 7th cutting Alfalfa harvest as farmers wait for a good weather window. Growers are having difficulty producing export quality hay from this cutting as the crop is either over mature or has received rain. Temperatures have cooled across the region and quality is expected to improve as the rains recede.
