Harvest Update

July 15, 2015

ALFALFA

Showers fell across Utah and New Mexico last week slowing down 2nd cutting Alfalfa harvest. Not much progress was made this past week and growers are still in a holding pattern as they navigate their harvest activities around monsoon season.

Arizona and Nevada growers are finishing up baling their 5th cutting. They will begin their 6th cutting within the next week or so, weather permitting.

In the Pacific Northwest, 2nd cutting has wrapped up. Overall, the hot and dry weather presented several challenges for harvest. The area was able to get some relief from the high temperatures this week and some growers have begun early 3rd cutting harvest.

TIMOTHY

Growers in Washington will begin their 2nd cutting Timothy harvest within the next couple of weeks. Total harvested acres will be down as some farmers lack irrigation and others plowed out their fields to switch to alternate crops.

STRAW

Growers in the Willamette Valley are in the final stages of Straw harvest. Fescue harvest is nearly finished for the year with only a few fields left to bale. Meanwhile, all of the Rye fields have been cut and a few growers have begun baling. The Straw tonnage is down this year due to the hot weather and we are seeing fairly consistent quality throughout the Valley.
