Harvest Update

September 30, 2015

ALFALFA

Good weather has helped growers in the Western United States make steady progress on Alfalfa harvest this week.

While a few growers work to complete 3rd cutting harvest, 4th cutting is well underway in New Mexico. Growers have had good weather and are putting up some very nice, green Alfalfa from their 4th cutting crop.

A few Oregon growers are also pushing to get the last 3rd cutting fields baled this week. Meanwhile, many growers are in the middle of 4th cutting harvest. The hay has a nice, green appearance and the majority of this cutting will be sold domestically.

Utah is finishing up it's 4th cutting harvest. Nearly all the fields are cut and over half the fields have been baled. As upcoming forecasts call for increased chances of showers, growers will push hard to finish up harvest before it rains.

Growers in Washington are baling the final 4th cutting fields this week and South Columbia Basin growers are midway through 5th cutting harvest. The Alfalfa hay being baled has a good green color and a nice soft quality.

In the Pacific Southwest, growers have 6th cutting harvest wrapped up and have made a good start on their 7th cutting. Weather has been unseasonably hot over the last several days. In some areas temperatures have been above 100 degrees. Temperatures are expected to return to the 90s in a few days. Export quality hay from these cuttings will be limited.
